NEW QUESTION: 1
A database administrator is operating a virtual machine (VM) configured with 16 vCPU and 64GB of RAM. A recent performance audit has indicated that this virtual machine is oversized and is using less than 60% of its configured CPU and memory capacity.

* The ESXi host that contains this VM has 2 physical processors with 10 cores per processor, and 128GB of RAM.
* This physical host's architecture is split into two equal NUMA nodes.
Which vCPU and RAM configuration for the VM allows for the most resources, but also provides the performance benefit of local NUMA access?
A. 16 vCPU and 32GB RAM
B. 10 vCPU and 64GB RAM
C. 4 vCPU and 16GB RAM
D. 12 vCPU and 64GB RAM
Answer: B
Explanation:
128/20=6.4*10=64 (10vCPU and 64GB)
https://blogs.vmware.com/performance/2017/03/virtual-machine-vcpu-and-vnuma-rightsizing-rules-of-thumb.html
"When a vNUMA topology is calculated, it only considers the compute dimension. It does not take into account the amount of memory configured to the virtual machine, or the amount of memory available within each pNUMA node when a topology is calculated. So, this needs to be accounted for manually.
Example:
An ESXi host has 2 pSockets, each with 10 Cores per Socket, and has 128GB RAM per pNUMA node, totaling 256GB per host.
If you create a virtual machine with 128GB of RAM and 1 Socket x 8 Cores per Socket, vSphere will create a single vNUMA node. The virtual machine will fit into a single pNUMA node.
If you create a virtual machine with 192GB RAM and 1 Socket x 8 Cores per Socket, vSphere will still only create a single vNUMA node even though the requirements of the virtual machine will cross 2 pNUMA nodes resulting in remote memory access. This is because only the compute dimension in considered.
The optimal configuration for this virtual machine would be 2 Sockets x 4 Cores per Socket, for which vSphere will create 2 vNUMA nodes and distribute 96GB of RAM to each of them."
