Answer: B

NEW QUESTION: 2

The team is creating plans at the Strategy Horizon. Diverse opinions are delaying this effort because different people are focused on different timeframes. After some discussion the team realizes they need to focus their efforts on the following viewpoint:

- A. Local view of the effect on the community.
- B. Broader view of the impact of the change to the organization
- C. Business view of the teams working on the initiatives
- D. Micro-view of the potential changes to the organization

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION: 3

A developer implements an asynchronous implementation for calculating insurance proposals. The input data for the calculations is made available on a single message queue. Two types of insurance proposals will be calculated: car and life. Messages with data for other insurance types are posted on the queue but should be left on the queue by this implementation. Which statement is true?

- A. The developer will NOT succeed because all messages will be consumed from the queue.
- B. The developer can implement a push-back mechanism if the message is of the wrong type.
- C. The developer can use a messageSelector to receive only the car and life data message if the JMS body contains selectable data.
- D. The developer can use a messageSelector to receive only the car and life data message if the header contains properties to make selection.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

A JMS message selector allows a client to specify, by header field references and property references, the messages it is interested in. Only messages whose header and property values match the selector are delivered. What it means for a message not to be delivered depends on the MessageConsumer being used (see QueueReceiver and TopicSubscriber).
