Azure Blob storage is a cloud storage service that provides a simple interface for storing and retrieving data. It is designed for high availability and durability. The data is stored in multiple copies across different physical hardware and data centers. This ensures that the data is protected from hardware failures and natural disasters. Azure Blob storage is also highly scalable, allowing you to store large amounts of data and to grow your storage capacity as needed. It is a cost-effective solution for storing data that is accessed infrequently or for archival purposes. Azure Blob storage is integrated with other Azure services, such as Azure Data Lake Storage and Azure Cosmos DB, to provide a comprehensive data management solution. The service is available in multiple regions around the world, ensuring low latency and high availability for your data. Azure Blob storage is a key component of the Azure cloud ecosystem and is used by many organizations to store and manage their data in the cloud.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The Power BI service partitions data based on date range. This is what enables only certain partitions to be refreshed incrementally. To make this work, the partition filter conditions are pushed down to the source system by including them in the queries. Using Power Query terminology, this is called "query folding". It is not recommended that incremental refresh is used when the required query folding cannot take place.
