NEW QUESTION: 1
A pregnant woman at 36 weeks' gestation is followed for PIH and develops proteinuria. To increase protein in her diet, which of the following foods will provide the greatest amount of protein when added to her intake of 100 mL of milk?
A. One package vitamin-fortified gelatin drink
B. Fifty milliliters light cream and 2 tbsp corn syrup
C. Thirty grams powdered skim milk and 1 egg
D. One small scoop (90 g) vanilla ice cream and 1 tbsp chocolate syrup
Answer: C
Explanation:
Explanation
(A) This choice would provide more unwanted fat and sugar than protein. (B) Skim milk would add protein.
Eggs are good sources of protein while low in fat and calories.
(C) The benefit of protein from ice cream would be outweighed by the fat content. Chocolate syrup has caffeine, which is contraindicated or limited in pregnancy. (D) Although most animal proteins are higher in protein than plant proteins, gelatin is not. It loses protein during the processing for food consumption.

NEW QUESTION: 2
Which of the following RMAN structures can data from a datafile span?
A. RMAN backup-set pieces within a given backup set
B. None of the above
C. RMAN channels
D. RMAN backups
E. RMAN backup-set pieces spanning backup sets
Answer: A

NEW QUESTION: 3

Refer to the exhibit. As a network administrator, you have configured a dual-rate, dual-bucket policer in accordance with RFC 2698 on the serial interface of you router, connecting to your provider. The SLA with your provider states that you should only send AF31 (limited to 150 kb/s), AF32 (limited to 50 kb/s)and AF33 (best effort). Your service provider claims you are not conforming to the SLA. Which two things are wrong with this configuration? (Choose two.)

A. The configuration of a service policy on half-duplex Ethernet interfaces is not supported.
B. The policer is configured in the wrong class.
C. The class class-default sub-command of the policy-map limit command should be set to the DSCP default.
D. This policer configuration is not implementing RFC 2698 dual-bucket, dual-rate.
E. The violate action is wrong.
Answer: B,E
Explanation:
All of the policing is supposed to be applied to AF31 & AF32 but instead it is applied to AF33 Feature Overview Networks police traffic by limiting the input or output transmission rate of a class of traffic based on userdefined criteria. Policing traffic allows you to control the maximum rate of traffic sent or received on an interface and to partition a network into multiple priority levels or class of service (CoS). The Two-Rate Policer performs the following functions: Limits the input or output transmission rate of a class of traffic based on user-defined criteria. Marks packets by setting the IP precedence value, IP differentiated services code point (DSCP) value, Multiprotocol Label Switching (MPLS) experimental value, Quality of Service (QoS) group, ATM Cell Loss Priority (CLP) bit, and the Frame Relay Discard Eligibility (DE) bit. With the Two-Rate Policer, you can enforce traffic policing according to two separate rates-committed information rate (CIR) and peak information rate (PIR). You can specify the use of these two rates, along with their corresponding values, by using two keywords, cir and pir, of the police command. For more information about the police command, see the "Command Reference" section of this document. The Two-Rate Policer manages the maximum rate of traffic through a token bucket algorithm. The token bucket algorithm can use the user-configured values to determine the maximum rate of traffic allowed on an interface at a given moment in time. The token bucket algorithm is affected by all traffic entering or leaving the interface (depending on the location of the interface on which the Two-Rate Policer is configured) and is useful in managing network bandwidth in cases where several large packets are sent in the same traffic stream. The token bucket algorithm provides users with three actions for each packet: a conform action, an exceed action, and an optional violate action. Traffic entering the interface with Two-Rate Policer configured is placed in to one of these categories. Within these three categories, users can decide packet treatments. For instance, packets that conform can be configured to be sent, packets that exceed can be configured to be sent with a decreased priority, and packets that violate can be configured to be dropped. The Two-Rate Policer is often configured on interfaces at the edge of a network to limit the rate of traffic entering or leaving the network. In the most common configurations, traffic that conforms is sent and traffic that exceeds is sent with a decreased priority or is dropped. Users can change these configuration options to suit their network needs.

Note Additionally, the Two-Rate Policer enables you to implement Differentiated Services (DiffServ) Assured Forwarding (AF) Per-Hop Behavior (PHB) traffic conditioning. For more information about DiffServ, refer to the "Implementing DiffServ for End-to-End Quality of Service" chapter of the Cisco IOS Quality of Service Solutions Configuration Guide, Release 12.2. Police To configure traffic policing, use the police command in policy-map class configuration mode. To remove traffic policing from the configuration, use the no form of this command. police {cir cir} [bc conform-burst] {pir pir} [be peak-burst] [conform-action action[exceed-action action [violateaction action]]] no police {cir cir} [bc conform-burst] {pir pir} [be peak-burst] [conform-action action [exceed-action action[violate-action action]]] Syntax Description
