NEW QUESTION: 1
Your network contains a server named Server1 that runs Windows Server 2012. Server1 has the DHCP Server server role installed.
All of the client computers that are in a subnet named Subnet1 receive their IP address configurations from Server1.
You plan to add another DHCP server named Server2 to Subnet1.
You need to recommend changes to the DHCP infrastructure to ensure that the client computers continue to receive IP addressing information if a single DHCP server fails.

What should you do?
More than one answer choice may achieve the goal. Select the BEST answer.
A. Create a DHCP failover cluster.
B. Create a Network Load Balancing (NLB) cluster.
C. Configure Failover for the scope.
D. Create a split scope.
Answer: C
Explanation:
One of the great features in Windows Server 2012 R2 is the DHCP failover for Microsoft
DHCP scopes. Failover is where the environment suffers an outage of a service which triggers the failover of that service function to a secondary server or site. The assumption for most failover configurations is that the primary server is completely unavailable.

NEW QUESTION: 3
A company has an on-premises Microsoft SQL Server environment and Microsoft Azure SQL Database instances. The environments host several customer databases.
You configure an Always On Availability Group for a customer. You must create log reports for the customer that detail when the log is flushed to disk on the primary and secondary replica.

You need to develop a report containing the requested information.
In the table below, identify the log type that you should use for each replica.
NOTE: Make only one selection in each column. Each correct selection is worth one point.

Answer:
Explanation:

Explanation

Flush on primary: Log flush
Log flush. Log data is generated and flushed to disk on the primary replica in preparation for replication to the secondary replica. It then enters the send queue.
Flush on secondary: Log hardened
The log is flushed on the secondary replica, and then a notification is sent to the primary replica to acknowledge completion of the transaction.
