NEW QUESTION: 4 Which of the following strategies should the nurse include when planning care for children of migrant workers? A. Stress the importance of using one primary care provider. B. Delay immunization because of acute illness. C. Provide parents with copies of medical records. D. Schedule preventive services at acute illness visits. Answer: C

Explanation: Migrant workers should be provided with the medical records and immunization records for their children, including growth charts. The parents should also be encouraged to take those records with them to every health care visit, including Emergency Department visits. It is important to provide immunizations even when the child is there for an acute illness because preventive care is often not obtained. Preventive services should also be provided, not scheduled, when a child presents for an acute illness. Using a single primary care provider is not an option for most migrant families. The nurse should ask the parents about where they are going next and give them the name, address, and phone numbers of providers there. Health Promotion and Maintenance
