Its accounting practice permits the transfer of unaccounted transactions from one period to another. What will happen if it runs the Payables Unaccounted transactions Sweep program?

- A. The accounting date of the invoice will change to the first day of the new period specified.
- B. The accounting date of the invoice will change to the same day of the new period specified.
- C. The accounting date- of the Invoice will change to the first day of next period.
- D. The accounting date of the invoice will NOT change but the user can close the existing period
- E. The accounting date of the Invoice will change to the same day of next period.

Answer: A

Explanation:

The Unaccounted Transactions Sweep Program transfers unaccounted transactions from one accounting period to another. Because you cannot close a Payables period that has unaccounted transactions in it, if your accounting practices permit it, you might want to use this program to change the accounting date of the transactions to the next open period. For example, you have invoices for which you cannot resolve holds before the close, and your accounting practices allow you to change invoice distribution GL dates. Submit the program to change invoice distribution GL dates to the first day of the next open period so you can close the current period.
