Which of the following offers the LEAST secure encryption capabilities?

- A. PAP
- B. NTLM
- C. CHAP
- D. TwoFish

Answer: A

Explanation:

PAP transmits unencrypted ASCII passwords over the network and is therefore considered insecure. It is used as a last resort when the remote server does not support a stronger authentication protocol, like CHAP or EAP.

Incorrect Answers:

A. TwoFish provides stronger encryption compared to NTLM, CHAP and PAP. TwoFish is a symmetric key block cipher with a block size of 128 bits and key sizes up to 256 bits. TwoFish is related to the earlier block cipher Blowfish.

C. NTLM provides stronger encryption compared to CHAP and PAP. NT LAN Manager (NTLM) is a suite of Microsoft security protocols that provides authentication, integrity, and confidentiality to users. NTLM is being replaced by Kerberos.

D. CHAP provides a more secure encryption than PAP. CHAP provides protection against replay attacks by the peer through the use of an incrementally changing identifier and of a variable challenge-value.
